Others are playing for college basketball teams or keeping up with the moves. Here are athletes who could be in the spotlight on the summer circuit: Chantel o'Neel The newest addition to the Duke women's tennis team will make her first appearance at the U.S. Open in just under three weeks. The 16-year-old o'Neel is the No. 2-ranked high school player in the world and has set a standard for success in teen tennis. She just made her last appearance at the U.S. Open in 2011. Daneisha Goodman The rising senior is one of the top all-around athletes in the world. She is the No. 1-ranked high school pole vaulter in the world and continues to improve. She won the Arizona State championship in the hammer throw recently and was just named the USATF national indoor track and field champion. She is the leader in the national high school record book in the pole vault (14.96 meters) and 100 meters hurdles (12.70 meters). Sylvia Fowles The reigning NCAA 200-meter hurdles champion has participated in the London Olympics and won a silver medal in the 100-meter hurdles at the World Championships in Moscow. Fowles is the second-ranked in the world behind Dafne Schippers of the Netherlands. She has run a personal record of 12.98 meters this season. Hannah Campbell The University of Minnesota hockey player, who ranks No. 1 in the United States and No. edd6d56e20
