Now I'm trying to override some behavior using __set because I want to implement some __get magic. For example, if I were using the old implementation, I could do something like: class Class_IDM_Default { private static $_instances = array(); private static function _getInstance($class_name, $params) { if (!isset(self::$_instances[$class_name]) { self::$_instances[$class_name] = new $class_name($params); } return self::$_instances[$class_name]; } } And then, I could use it like 77a5ca646e

Investigation of the bacterial communities and the main bacterial groups in the Lodz region was performed by means of high-throughput sequencing (HTS) of the 16S rRNA gene. The bacterial sequences were recovered from two soils and two pristine natural soils (peat, seven samples) and four soils contaminated with heavy metals (three sites of heavy metal pollution and one site of organic pollution), all at the sampling points of the microproject "Gram-positive microorganisms of the soil--colonizing properties and ecophysiology" (GA2-SOP). Additionally, the cultivable bacterial population (total culturable and lactic acid bacteria) and the fungi were determined. The cultivated bacteria were dominated by the genera Bacillus and Lactococcus, while the analyzed soil samples were dominated by the genus Bacillus. A total of 815,958 sequences were obtained, of which 1,851 belonged to the cultivated bacteria, 623 to the fungi, 935 to the Gram-positive microorganisms, while 3,712 to the Gram-negative microorganisms. In general, the bacterial and fungal composition was very similar in the examined soils. Nevertheless, the bacterial communities were more diverse in the contaminated sites. The most abundant microbial groups in the contaminated sites were gram-positive bacteria (from 2.2% to 12.6%) and the gram-negative bacteria (from 5.9% to 12.8%). The most abundant genera in the contaminated soils were Bacillus (from 2.2% to 10.5%), Lactococcus (from 2.2% to 12.5%), and Pseudomonas (from 6.7% to 12.8%). Moreover, the observed diversity of the microbial communities (based on the number of observed species and the Chao1 index) was higher in the polluted sites, whereas the Simpson index showed that the community diversity was lower in the polluted sites.Q: What's the difference between using Enumerable.Where(predicate) vs. Enumerable.Where(predicate.Invoke) I'm just curious about the difference
